

The motor-compressor unit of the air conditioner is warranted for five years by its manufacturer if the owner has a properly registered warranty. The Airstream two year warranty for the trailer will replace defective parts free of charge. The additional three-year Armstrong warranty covers the motor-compressor unit only to be free from manufacturing defects under normal use and service immediately following expiration of the two year Airstream warranty. The trailer or the defective part must be delivered to an Authorized Airstream Dealer, an Airstream Factory or the Armstrong Furnace Company.

The cooling unit of the refrigerator carries a five-year warranty by its manufacturer providing the trailer owner has properly registered his unit. The Airstream two year warranty will replace any defective part on a no-charge basis. The three year additional warranty will replace a defective cooling unit upon request of same from any Authorized Airstream dealer, either Airstream Factory, or any Dometic Distributor. However, labor and shipping charges are the owner's responsibility. Units replaced during the initial five year period will be warranted only for the remaining portion of this first five year period.

Any other part of the trailer is warranted two years from date of purchase against defects in material and workmanship and will be corrected without cost upon the return of the trailer, or defective part, to any Airstream Factory or Authorized Service Center.

You will notice the second paragraph of the warranty explaining the conditions is printed in Italic type so it will catch the eye of the potential Airstream owner. In other words, we don't want him to come back and say he didn't know about it.

Warranties of merchantability or fitness means that the trailer and its related equipment must perform the function for which it was intended. The door lock must secure the door, the refrigerator must keep food, the trailer itself must tow properly and be inhabitable as advertised.

Exclusions are:

....1. Normal Wear.

We all know that a refrigerator lighter flint or water purifier pack is not expected to last two years. It is normal for curtains, upholstery, floor covering, tires, window, door and vent seals to show wear or even wear out within two years depending upon the amount of usage, weather and atmospheric conditions.
